One morning, Ravi was awakened by a strange noise coming from his bedroom window. Feeling sleepy, he walked unsteadily to the window and looked out. (16)

The noise was coming from the old mango tree in front of his house. He heard faint chirping coming from the tree. To his delight, he spotted a nest with a mother (17) bird and her chicks.

Suddenly, the thin branch on which the nest was resting moved. A crow had perched on the branch. This sudden movement shocked the chicks and they started (18) to chirp loudly. Instinctively, the mother bird calmed the chicks by keeping them close to (19) her.

The famished crow was eyeing the chicks. Ravi had to do something to care for the birds. (20) Immediately, he grabbed a tennis ball from his room and threw it towards the tree. The impact of the ball hitting the tree, startled the crow and it flew away. Ravi was relieved.

The great white shark, with its 3000 teeth, is a fearsome predator of the deep sea.

However, because of the highly profitable trade in products _____ the sharks such as (29)

teeth, jaws and fins, this much feared fish is in danger _____ extinction.
(30)

Globally over the last 50 years, there has been a reported decline of between 60%

_____ 95% in great white sharks. The main threat _____ its survival comes from commercial and recreational fisheries.
(31) (32)

The average size of the great white shark is 4 to 5 metres. _____ diet usually (33)

consists of fish, rays and sea lions. Great white sharks are found near the shore of coastlines such as those of California and Australia. Therefore, humans _____ choose to swim along (34)

these shores enter the habitat of _____ creatures that have existed there for millions of (35)

years.

The very survival of the great white shark is _____ stake. Peter Benchley, the (36)

famous author of Jaws, _____ made a plea for its protection. "We are already close to killing (37)

_____ the top of the oceanic food chain with catastrophic consequences that we can't imagine." Let us hope that his warning does not go unheeded.
(38)

Research has shown that gardening provides many benefits. Gardening went beyond  beautifying your house and common coridoor or backyard. In fact, it benefits your physical and mental health.

(40)

Gardening be a good form of physical activity for everyone. It involves a lot of moving  about; activities such as weeding, raking or even harvesting can improve your flexible and strengthen your joints and muscles.

(43)

Besides improving your physical health, gardening can help to steamulait your senses  and boost your mental well-being. Some studies has shown that more people now  (44)  aknorledge the therapeutic power of just being close to plants. This connektion with plants  helps to reduce stress.

(47)

Gardening can also enhance your crieitiviti, especially when you are planning the  layout of your garden, or even chose the colours of the plants to sprus up your home!

(48) (49)

Gardening can be enjoyed by both young and old. While tending to the plants, the  young learn patience while the seniors can impart the values of care and consider to them. With the multiple benefits of gardening, why not start greening your thumbs now?

Have you ever eaten a fried cricket? For many of us, the thought of an all-insect dinner can be disgusting. However, people in most cultures around the world have been eating insects _____ ancient times.

There are _____ insects in the world than all the animals combined. In less developed countries _____ land is not suitable for raising cattle, insects are a useful source of protein. Like any other food, insects need to be washed and cooked before they are eaten.

The grasshopper is the most widely _____ insect in the world. They can be cooked in many different ways and have a nutty flavour. In Mexico, grasshoppers are _____ fried or boiled. In North America, the locals grind them _____ a paste to make fried cakes.
 (56)

Many insects are eaten as larvae. It is the form some insects take after hatching from an egg. A larva is like a short, fat worm and is considered a rare treat. Due to its high fat _____, they are sometimes fried in the cooking pots using oil.
 (57)
 (58)

Not only are insects eaten as a main course but they _____ make a tasty snack. In Columbia, leaf cutter ants are fried like peanuts and sold in cinemas instead of popcorn. Are you ready for more? How about a sweet honeypot ant instead of ice-cream? You grab a live one by the head and bite off the large glob of honey that it _____ in its abdomen.
 (59)

Insects are so _____ that it will be a waste if we do not use them as a _____ of food. Looking for insects _____ not a challenging task at all. With a keen sense of _____, you can spot an insect in almost every nook and _____ . The next time you want to kill an insect, think again!

Fatima stood waist-deep in the shallow part of the river. She had been looking forward to this moment since late afternoon. The pregnant woman loosened her black hair, and with her hands scooped the water and let it run through her hair and her body. She smiled blissfully, thankful for the momentary coolness from the river.

When she turned around; her eyes caught the glaring eyes of the tiger. Although she was afraid, she stood still. It was on the bank, merely 12 metres away from her. They stood motionless, looking at each other for what seemed like an eternity. The occasional growls became less menacing each time. The glare of its eyes had also changed into a bored expression. Soon, the tiger lay down with its huge paws stretched out in front. It was only at this point that Fatima realised that the tiger's belly was swollen just like hers. Could the tiger be expecting her cubs soon?

The chirping of the crickets and the distant hoot of an owl signalled the impending darkness. Fatima grew desperate when the tiger showed no signs of going away. Her hands wandered over her stomach, and the realisation that she was a being with two lives forced her to make a bid for an escape. When the tiger turned its eyes away from her, Fatima dived under water with a desperate movement and made for the opposite bank, in the direction of the village.

The villagers panicked when they first heard an exaggerated version of the story by Fatima's mother. The village headman arrived at her house to question her on the whereabouts of the tiger. Unlike the villagers who wanted to have the tiger killed, Fatima was against it. She said, "The tiger could have easily sprung at me as it was near but it didn't. Also there was nothing murderous about its eyes and they looked gentle and bored." The headman frowned at what she had just said.

The headman told the crowd, "A tiger is not a pleasant thing to have wandering near our village. For the peace and safety of everyone, the tiger must be destroyed without delay." The men stared at the floor in silence and avoided the headman's eyes. They knew how dangerous it was to track and kill a tiger at night, especially when the dense forest gave the tiger an advantage to hide and strike.

A man, by the name of Mamood, walked into the crowd with a rifle slung across his shoulders. He was all for hunting the tiger. "We have to think of the women and children. They will never move an inch out of their houses until they know that the tiger is dead," said Mamood. Everyone present was aware that he was a sharp shooter. For this reason, the men decided to rally around him and left the village to hunt for the tiger.

Soon after, Fatima was resting in the hut with her mother when she felt a sharp pain shoot through her. Her hands went over her stomach. Her mother advised her to lie down on the mat. A faraway crack of a rifle was heard. Then another shot followed. The air was suddenly filled with excited voices. The old lady opened the door and heard a youth shout, "Hurrah for Mamood, Auntie! They managed to kill the tiger. After the animal was dead, they found three of the tiniest tiger cubs whose eyes were scarcely opened. Mamood said that they could not be more than a few hours old. No wonder the tiger put up a fierce fight and fought with all its might before it was killed by Mamood," the boy said excitedly in one single breath.

Fatima was in a sombre mood later that night. The thought that she might be the indirect cause of a tiger's death was unbearable to her. She wished she had the means to stop the hunt and save the tiger's life. But she also understood the village headman's argument for the tiger's destruction. Not too far, she heard the cubs' whimpering within the village compound and she knew too well what sort of fate awaited the cubs the next day.
